

The National Valve Museum

Updates October 2016

The timeline feature from 1956 on Stereophony in the home was published just two years before my parents were able to purchase a Murphy Radiogram with stereo amplifiers. The first microgroove or LP they bought was the soundtrack of the film South Pacific. The stereo separation in the song 'there is nothing like a dame' was superb. The writer of the piece shows the social conditions of the day with references to 'fireplaces' and a misogynistic tone that is offensive today.

Corrected pin connections for ECH81 family. Pin 7 is Heptode g3
